The Cooked Seed A Memoir by Anchee Min

The Cooked Seed picks up where her previous memoir, Red Azalea left off, focusing on her move to the United States in 1984 and her unwavering goal of getting a green card. The immigration experience can arguably rival her experience in the labor collective in China. Working on Madame Mao's propaganda films and in the labor camps, Min at least knows the language and the rules. She does not make excuses regarding either place.

"The Cooked Seed's" richest addition to the ever-budding literature of the culturally transplanted are Min's excavations of her traumatic youth and fraught transition, and her explorations of the immigrant's "permanent sense of loss and dislocation" all of which continue to define her as both an American and a writer.
