I've also made the drink at home. The at-home version doesn't come close to the simply magical drink at the Mint Julep Bar. Maybe it's the atmosphere, the people, I don't know. Definitely worth trying. For me, a visit to the park wouldn't be the same without stopping by the bar. A Mint Julep is well, magic! on a hot day.

Disneyland's Mint Julep Copycat Six Sisters' Stuff

If your recipe calls for mint or peppermint extract, but you have none on hand, you can sub in mint oil. Both are flavored by the leaves of the peppermint plant. The oil is more concentrated than the typical extract, so you need to use a lot less to flavor your recipe. Divide the amount of peppermint extract called for in the recipe by four. If your recipes read "1 teaspoon peppermint extract," you'll need 1/4 teaspoon oil at the most. Hope this helps.
