The phrase 'the ghost in the machine' was coined by Gilbert Ryle in his 1949 book The Concept of Mind, and was intended to point out the absurdity of traditional Cartesian mind-body dualism; presumably there was also an attempt to echo the phrase deus ex machina, or "god from the machine", i.e. an artificial solution to a complex problem.

The Ghost in the Machine by Arthur Koestler Goodreads

In "The Ghost in the Machine" he concludes, and I feel he does so without much conviction, that the human race, owing to some faults/defects during evolution, may be marching to its early end. Much has happened in science since Koestler wrote in the sixties and seventies.

I read "Ghost in the Machine" immediately after I read Rupert Sheldrake's "Science Set Free: 10 Paths to New Discovery." Sheldrake, if you are not aware of him, is a British biologist who has views very similar to Koestler's. Sheldrake began writing about 25 years ago, and he has adopted some of Koestler's terminology, such as "holon." I won't say much more about him, but check him out if you liked Koestler's book. He also has quite a few lectures on youtube.

Ghost in the Machine Skeleton Creek 2 by Patrick Carman

In the book Ghost in the Machine it is to me the best book in the series. Some of the themes are defiance and mystery, one of the things that shows defiance is when Sarah and Ryan are told again and again to stay away from one another and of course they don't. The theme mystery is all over the book like when Sarah and Ryan find out who "Old Joe Bush" is and right there the book ends.
