52 Leadership Promises for Every Week of the Year Lolly

I promise not to hold meetings just for the sake of holding meetings. I promise not compromise my high standards or to cause others to compromise theirs. I promise to always have an open mind and open heart. I promise to appreciate my time and to value the time of those around me. I promise to give latitude instead of direction.

Leadership Promises Broken A Lack of Integrity Rick Conlow

Leadership promises should be made sparingly because leaders as a whole are highly distrusted today. Promises without follow-up, follow-through or action is lying dishonest. If you have integrity it means the promises you make, you keep. This builds trust and employee engagement.
