How to Make Natural Soap Without Lye Our Pastimes

Lye is a controversial ingredient in soap that, while required to convert fats and oils to soap, is not necessary for those making natural soap at home. If you want to make homemade soap without having to use lye as an ingredient, it is as simple as purchasing soap bases such as glycerin from specialty and craft stores. These soap bases can be easily transformed into homemade soaps with your choice of fragrance and color.

Make Soap Without Using Lye Brown Thumb Mama

The reason that lye is used so often in natural handmade soaps is because there is NO other way to make it. Without Lye, you do NOT have soap. Period. The MP bases are making soap without lye because the company that has made the base has already made the soap and used the lye for you. There is no such thing as soap made without lye. At some point, someone added lye to fat and/or oils to make it into soap. That is what sanctification is.
