The Problem of Pain Quotes by C S Lewis

Mental pain is less dramatic than physical pain, but it is more common and also more hard to bear. The frequent attempt to conceal mental pain increases the burden: it is easier to say My tooth is aching than to say My heart is broken.

The problem of pain is independent of beliefs, it will always occur to anybody. C.S. Lewis approaches the problem of pain from a Christian perspective and (to me) successfully explains the concept of pain in relation to God and humanity, divine and mortal. Lewis challenges our very thinking to a level that is looking beyond the obvious. This book encourages to expand our moral horizon just as much as our horizon of intelligence.

The Problem of Pain answers the universal question, "Why would an all-loving, all-knowing God allow people to experience pain and suffering?" Master Christian apologist C.S. Lewis asserts that pain is a problem because our finite, human minds selfishly believe that pain-free lives would prove that God loves us.

The Problem of Pain, the first of a series of popular works on Christian doctrine, was written in 1940, twenty years before his beloved wife, Joy Davidman, died of cancer in the third year of their short-lived marriage. In the book Lewis considers the problem of suffering from a purely theoretical standpoint.

The Problem of Pain demonstrates a more distant, less emotional reaction to humanity's situation, while A Grief Observed reads like a psalm of lament from within pain itself. The two texts compliment one another by identifying parts of our struggle, the intellectual and physical difficulty life will bring, and how pain can bend us toward a loving God if we let it.

'The Problem of Pain ' by C S Lewis Sam Selikoff

The problem of pain is only a 'problem' if we ascribe righteousness and love to our reality. Similarly, we must explain the historical development of Christianity. People can deny morality and the feeling of the Numinous, but if they do so, they cut themselves off from the great poets and prophets of all of human history.
