How To Deduct Business Startup Costs on Business Taxes

You may deduct up to $5,000 in start-up costs in your first year in business. This deduction is restricted if you have over $50,000 in start-up costs. If you have additional start-up costs over the $5,000, you can amortize these costs over 15 years. If you are not going to be profitable in your first year, you may want to consider another option to minimize your taxes in years where you make more profit.

3 Ways to Deduct Business Start Up Costs wikiHow

If your start-up expenses exceed $55,000, you won't be able to claim the $5,000 deduction for the first year. For example, if start-up or organizational costs are $51,000, your deduction is reduced to $4,000. If start-up or organizational costs are $55,000 or more, the $5,000 deduction is completely phased out for the first year. If your startup or organizational costs are $3,000, that is the amount you can deduct since it is less than $5,000.
