Such a house my father built after the Civil War, and when he married my mother they went to live in it. It was completely covered with vines, climbing roses and honeysuckles. From the garden it looked like an arbour. The little porch was hidden from view by a screen of yellow roses and Southern smilax. It was the favourite haunt of humming-birds and bees.

"Story of my Life," written by Jay McInherny from the first person point of view of one Alison Poole, a 20-something bon-vivant actress wannabe, is both lively and engaging. McInherny writes convincingly as a young woman (at least from my male point of view)--no mean feat. The lurid and wrenching details of her drug-addled, oversexed New York life are sometimes horrifying, but I found myself pulling for her anyway, despite her many flaws.
